Transparent and frequent public consultations are critical to power industry clients who need to ensure high voltage transmission lines have right-of-way access to distribute power from generating facilities to the communities they serve. Vertex communicates directly with various stakeholders and continues this communication long after land transactions and negotiations are complete. With a thorough understanding of the complex regulatory requirements that govern this industry, Vertex will ensure project timeliness while maintaining stakeholder relations and regulatory compliance.

Our team of land professionals have extensive experience working on distribution and transmission infrastructure projects and understand the unique nature of overhead power projects; which often draw attention from landowners and various other stakeholders.
